17th Annual Meeting and Conference to be Held September 30 - October 2; 1994 Fulbright Prize to be Awarded

Conference participants will consider the theme “The Fulbright Legacy in the 21st Century.” Part of that legacy — the experience of distinguished, retired executive directors from Fulbright commissions around the world — will be recognized at the association’s 17th annual banquet on Friday, Sept. 30, at the ANA Hotel, Washington, D.C.

As part of the conference, the Fulbright Association will also award on Oct. 1 the 1994 J. William Fulbright Prize for International Understanding to former President Jimmy Carter, in recognition of his extraordinary contributions to increasing international understanding and cooperation. (See prize article on this page.)

J. William Fulbright Foreign Scholarship Board Chairman Ewell E. Murphy, Jr., will serve as master of ceremonies at the annual banquet. Honorees will be Renée Abarac6n, former executive director of the Fulbright commission in Uruguay, Frederick F. Carriere (Korea), Ulrich Littmann (Germany), Sharada Nayak (India), Cipriana Scelba (Italy), and Caroline A. Matano Yang (Japan.)

Angela Lee (United Kingdom 1991), cellist, and accompanist Ju­ Ying Song will perform at the banquet. The retired executive directors will serve on the opening conference panel on Saturday, Oct. 1, to discuss the Fulbright legacy in the 21st century.

The United States Information Agency’s Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs is making possible the participation of several distinguished foreign Fulbright alumni as conference speakers. At press time, the Fulbright Association had confirmed the participation of Dureid M. Mahasneh (USA 1983), Jordanian senior negotiator on the Water and Environment Sub-Group, bilateral talks with Israel, and Jordanian representative on the environment in the multilateral talks in the region.

Dr. Mahasneh is director-general of the Aqaba Ports Corporation. He will speak on the environment and diplomacy.

Invited foreign alumni speakers for the human rights panel are Antonio La Pergola (USA 1954), professor of law, University of Rome, president emeritus of the Italian Constitutional Court, and president, Energy Research Committee, European Parliament, and Celso Lafer (USA 1967), professor of law, University of Sao Paulo, and former Brazilian minister of foreign affairs.

Cesar Gaviria, secretary general of the Organization of American States and former president of Colombia, will speak on the human rights panel. Susan Tatton (Botswana 1993), director of the Legal Resources Project of the International Human Rights Commission, will also speak.

Former President Carter Named 1994 Fulbright Prize Laureate

The 1994 J. William Fulbright Prize for International Understanding will be awarded to former President Jimmy Carter at a ceremony on Oct. 1, the Fulbright Association has announced.

"It is tremendously exciting to be able to acknowledge former U.S. President Jimmy Carter as the second recipient of the J. William Fulbright Prize for International Understanding," said Stanley N. Katz, president of the American Council of Learned Societies and chairman of the international committee that selected President Carter to receive the Fulbright Prize.

"Jimmy Carter has done more for the public service in general and for the promotion of mutual understanding among nations in particular than any American chief executive since John Quincy Adams. His career constitutes a living example of the vitality of the principles which the Fulbright Prize honors."

The prize will be presented to (continued on page 7)
Standing Rules on Task Forces Approved

At a July meeting of the Board of Directors' Executive Committee, the association adopted standing rules on task forces. They cover formation and dissolutions of task forces, their governance and relations with other elements of the association, and task force activities, financing, budget development, and performance review.

To gauge whether membership support is broad enough to warrant formation of an association task force, the new rules give members with interests in a specific geographic area, discipline, or issue an opportunity to present their ideas to other members through an article in the association newsletter. Members interested in a task force must form an organizing committee of 15 association members in good standing. Using a standard format, the committee may then present its ideas for the task force in the association's newsletter.

If 100 members in good standing express interest in the task force by a specified deadline and the Board of Directors judges interest is sufficient, then representatives of the organizing committee may present their proposal to the board.

Once a task force is formed it may produce a newsletter and other periodic communications for its members, conduct a session at the annual conference, conduct meetings, and organize and operate a speakers bureau, as well as undertake other approved projects to further communication and exchange among association members concerning the task force issue.

Membership in task forces is only open to association members in good standing. Task force members will pay an annual $5 fee in addition to regular membership dues. The assessment will help defray association costs in supporting the task force.

Association support will include coordination of communications among task force organizers, the membership, and the Board of Directors. Directors, data entry on projects and interests of task force members and potential members, maintenance of a task force data base, bookkeeping, and consultation and review on any special projects.

Currently there are association task forces on AIDS and on Eastern and Central Europe and the former Soviet Union. Lilly Diaz (Spain 1989) chairs the AIDS Task Force. The Rev. Kornel F. Korn (Romania 1991) is chairman of the Task Force on Eastern and Central Europe and the former Soviet Union. The existing task forces will operate according to the standing rules.

A pilot phase in effect until Jan. 1, 1996, will permit creation of two more task forces. This preliminary period will allow for evaluation of task force contributions to the association mission and for formulating the standing rules as necessary.

To receive a copy of the standing rules on task forces, please contact the national office.

Project 2000 Update

Since adoption of the Project 2000 resolution in January, the Fulbright Association is pleased to report:

• an increase in membership from 3,700 to 4,000, an 8.1 percent gain for the first half of 1994
• enrollment of 101 new life members for a total of 2,227 towards the goal of enrolling 2,000 life members by the year 2000
• creation of a draft chapter handbook which will be presented at the chapter development seminar at the 17th annual conference
• development of a proposal for outside support for an advertising campaign to identify and enroll "lost" Fulbrighters

Please contact the national office for your ideas for achieving the Project 2000 goals of increasing the number of association members, creating additional chapters, and improving services to members and chapters.

The spring meeting of the Washington
Inland Empire Chapter held April 24 at Eastern Washington University's Faculty House included a reception for visiting Fulbrighters and a presentation by Larry Denny. Prof. Denny recently returned from a Fulbright grant in Kenya.

Members of the Massachusetts Chapter attended the May 10 diploma recital of baritone Christopher Nomura (Germany 1990) at the New England Conservatory. Nomura performed at the Fulbright Association's 16th annual conference in Washington last fall.

The Frederick R. Weisman Art Museum and the University of Minnesota joined the Minnesota Chapter in sponsoring its annual spring meeting on April 23. Held in the museum on the University of Minnesota campus, the program was organized around the theme "Changes Change and More Changes." Participants considered changes in various disciplines such as genetics and economics and discussed the state of knowledge about human rights.

Under the patronage of the Embassy of the Russian Federation, the National Capital Area Chapter held a reception on May 3 to honor Senator J. William Fulbright. James Collins, senior coordinator, Office of Ambassador-at-Large of the New Independent States, joined the Russian chargé d'affaires in addressing guests.

Ambassador Charles F. Dunbar spoke on "The Middle East in the New World" at the Northeast Ohio Chapter annual meeting May 7. Now president of the Cleveland Council on World Affairs, Ambassador Dunbar's diplomatic career spanned 32 years, a number of them in the Middle East. He served as head of the U.S. Embassy in Soviet-occupied Afghanistan and as ambassador to Qatar and then to Yemen during the Gulf War. In Washington, he was special assistant for Afghanistan in the State Department and special adviser on Islamic issues to the assistant secretary of state for human rights.

During the chapter business meeting, Shirley Seaton (Italy 1990) was elected president; Jae-youn Lee (Korea 1988), vice president; Francine Sobon (England 1985), secretary; and Vijay K. Mathur (India 1986), treasurer. The chapter was sponsored programs on "Slovenia and the City of Ljubljana," a presentation with slides by Rudolf M. Susel. and "The Collapse of the Soviet Union and the Future of Democracy in Russia and Ukraine," a lecture by Michael Nagle.

Clarke University President Richard H. Gallagher (Australia 1973) hosted a reception and organizational meeting for the Northern New York Chapter on April 21. At the meeting members elected Dalma H. Brunauer (Hungary 1985, Japan 1991), president; William E. Herman (Russia 1993), vice president; and David M. Craig (Yugoslavia 1981), secretary/treasurer. The chapter's first event on June 2 brought alumni and visiting Fulbrighters together at St. Lawrence University's Richard F. Brush Art Gallery where photographs by Faye A. Serio are on exhibit. Mrs. Serio accompanied her husband John to Greece where he was a Fulbright lecturer last year at Aristotle University in Thessaloniki. The chapter program included a discussion by the Serios on their Fulbright experience in Greece.

Among the recent events of the Oklahoma Chapter was a luncheon presentation by Barbara Schindler (The Netherlands 1992), social studies coordinator of the Oklahoma City public school system on her Fulbright experience in The Netherlands. Chapter members also attended a lecture on May 6 by Ludmilla Natsouka who spoke at Oklahoma City University on changes in St. Petersburg/Leningrad since St. Peter the Great's time. Dr. Natsouka accompanied her husband, Barbora Schindler discussing her Fulbright experience in The Netherlands at an Oklahoma Chapter meeting.

World Bar Association Sponsors Essay Contest

The World Bar Association has invited submittal of essays for its 1994 essay contest on the topic of "How Space?" Entries are due by Dec. 31. The winner, whose name will be announced on Law Day, May 1, 1995, will receive $1,500 and a WBA plaque. His or her article will also be published.

The 25th anniversary of the Apollo moon landing influenced the choice of the contest topic. Entries should address the question: "How did the moon figure into our space plans? How do we approach going into space as a society? What policies, procedures and governance changes are indicated?" and related issues.

According to WBA specifications, essays may be no longer than 3,000 words. (Exhibits, which are encouraged, are excluded from the word limit.) The front page should contain the essay’s title and the author’s name, address, and telephone number. Essayist must use 8 1/2” x 11” paper with 1 1/2” margins and double spaced text. Authors should submit a curriculum vitae with their essay. There is no entry fee.

Research materials related to the topic may be obtained from the World Bar Association offices. For information contact Sarah Bode, Executive Director, World Bar Association, 684 S. Yosemite St., Englewood, CO 80112. (303) 721-1178 or (800) 632-2828; (303) 721-1182 (FAX).

Fulbright Grants for U.S. Students

Applicants for 1995-96 Fulbright grants for graduate study or research abroad or for professional training in the creative and performing arts may request information from campus Fulbright program advisors if they are considering entering a college or university. At-large candidates may contact the New York City headquarters of the Institute of International Education or one of its regional offices in Chicago, Denver, Houston, or San Francisco.

Applicants must be U.S. citizens at the time of application and hold a bachelor’s degree or its equivalent by the beginning of the date of the grant. Creative and performing artists are not required to have a bachelor’s degree but must have four years relevant professional training or study. Candidates in medicine must have an M.D. or equivalent (e.g., D.D.S., O.D.) at the time of application. All applicants must be sufficiently proficient in the language of the host country to carry out their proposed study or research.

Full grants provide round-trip international transportation, maintenance for the tenure of the grant, a research allowance, and tuition waivers, if applicable. As Georgia Anne Geyer points out in her essay, "From Vienna: With Love and Understanding," the life of the Fulbrighter is not always what is expected, especially in the Cold War era. Robin Winks, in his afterword, upped on the point. "With the Cold War at an end... there is less need for (Fulbright) participants to be ready to make full use of the exchange program. The capacity for human beings to misunderstand one another has in no measure diminished..." From Varela and Fister they read the familiar story of an enriched life span.

The Fulbright Difference is a book with a very serious purpose, but it is not intended to make delightful, intellectually stimulating reading. Its purpose, as elaborated in the preface by editor Richard Arndt, is to establish that the Fulbright exchange program has made a difference not only in the lives of the participants but also in the course and nature of recent world history.

For almost half a century the Fulbright Program of educational exchange has invested in globalism and international understanding. It has opened possibilities for scholars to deepen their disciplines and expand their teaching and research experience of 200,000 Fulbrighters over the program’s history. It is evident that the world would be a much poorer place if there had been no Fulbright program.

Each essay tells, at a minimum, of the enrichment of a human life. Often, it is a number of lives that are enriched by the appearance of a Fulbrighter in their midst. Sometimes the Fulbright difference is manifest in the enhancement of a field of knowledge, in the publication of a valuable book, in a decades-long relationship between scholarly institutions, in a self-transforming insight into another culture, or simply in an enduring transnational friendship between families.

In the first section, the 1940s, Richard Arndt gives an amusing and thoughtful account of his own Fulbright year at post-war Diöpor's traditon-bound university. There he encounters a few of the various forms of anti-Americanism that challenged many of the American contributors.

In the 1950s, Leslie Fiedler confronts head-on the anti-Americanism of the Italian intellectual, and calmly dissects it while considering the proper response. He doesn’t rule out shouting when it seems indicated. Anna Maria Martellone, eventually to become a professor of American history in her native Italy, tells of preparing for her European history exams by reading her own copies of The U.S. (United States Information Service) library in Florence. While there she also browsed in American literature, an oblique preparation for a Fulbright at Harvard and a lyrical encounter with America and Americanism in the troubling time of Joseph McCarthy.

rich collection that it should probably not be read straight through. The reader is rewarded by picking at choice points according to the interest of the time or place of subject matter. The cumulative effect is persuasive of the point the editors wished to make; that the Fullbright Program has made a difference. Beyond that, however, the discussion is carried on at an intellectual level and with a concentration of purpose that stimulates the reader to ponder broader applications and projections. Especially for anyone involved in international relations, it is a book to think about; perhaps it even provides a humanistic counterweight to facile discussion of the clash of cultures.

One recurring concern is made explicit by the often clumsy protocols employed essay "Hispanist at Large" by 1970s grantee Roger Utt. Utt's Fulbright project eventually became the subject of a humanistic discourse that might learn from others," he writes. Especially for anyone involved in international relations, it is a book to think about; perhaps it even provides a humanistic counterweight to facile discussion of the clash of cultures.
