From the Director

The Fulbright Program is defined by individuals - tens of thousands of men and women who have traveled across the borders of their own countries and remained for long enough to be forced into confrontation with a strange culture. It is almost invariably a life-changing experience for the Fulbrighters, which in turn causes significant changes in those who receive them, whether through teaching or learning, living nearby or just exchanging ideas. The Fulbright grantee is a pebble dropped into the pool of another culture, causing ripples which widen and multiply, cross other ripples and sometimes transform into tidal waves. After forty-two years of existence, the Fulbright Program is too often reduced to statistics (how many thousands have been to what countries, what percentage have visited which continent and with what skills or disciplines). While these facts and figures are essential to an understanding of the Program and its importance, we must not lose sight of the individuals who have made it so successful and who are so determined to see that others after them are offered the same experience.

This newsletter is dedicated to the men and women who have seized this opportunity of a lifetime and continue to live by the philosophy which has made the Program great. Inside are the stories of those who have maintained and increased the worldwide contacts and projects which began during their Fulbright year. They are only a minute fraction of the complete story, a short paragraph in the book of the fundamental changes wrought by the simple concept of an extraordinary senator. It is the hope of the Association that thousands after them will continue to add to this story for a long time to come.

A Fulbright Family

Three members of one family served as Fulbright scholars and teachers in the school year 1987-88. The senior member of the family, Dr. Jeff Rider, an Assistant Professor of French at Wesleyan University, was awarded a research grant to Belgium's Institute of Medieval Studies of the Universite Catholique de Louvain and worked on a new edition of Calbert of Bruges' contemporary account of the assassination of the Count of Flanders in 1127.

His father Dr. John R. Rider, Professor of Mass Communications at Southern Illinois University-Edwardsville, served as Fulbright Lecturer at the Community College of Micronesia in Kolonia, Pohnpei in the area of mass communications and also as adviser to the Office of the President of the Federated States of Micronesia, in Public Information.

Louise Rider, a public school teacher in Alton, Illinois, received an At-Large Fulbright Award and served as a research scholar for the FSM, studying the educational system. She also taught at the Community College of Micronesia in Special Education.

Fulbright Scholar Adds to Portuguese University's American Literature Collection

Lawrence Kinsman (Portugal 1986), Assistant Professor of English at New Hampshire College, found a way to make his year of teaching American Literature at the University of Oporto's Institute for North American Studies memorable both for himself and for the institute.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

The Washington Area Chapter of the Fulbright Association held its second annual dinner on May 5 at the Fort McNair Officers' Club. Dinner co-chairpersons Drs. William Eugene Wright and chapter President Ellen Johnson were congratulated for its success. Guests in attendance were Dean Maurice A. East of the Eliot School of International Affairs at The George Washington University; Harriet Mayor, Executive Director of the Fulbright Association; Sherry Mueller, Director of the International Visitor Program of the Institute of International Education; Warren Obluck, Deputy Director of the Office of Academic Programs at the United States Information Agency; Cassandra A. Pyle, Executive Director of the Institute for International Education and Cultural Exchange. The first was sponsored by the Boston Fulbright Committee and the second was organized by the Boston Center for International Visitors together with the League of Women Voters of Hingham and was held at the Hingham Historical Society.

The Boston chapter held its annual meeting on May 19th at the Supreme Court. There was a brief business meeting, with reports from the Seminar and the Association, followed by a reception, dinner and featured speakers. The dinner discussion topic was "Environmental Challenges Facing the International Community." One of the speakers was Dr. Lester Brown, President of Worldwatch Institute and former Salzburg Seminar Faculty member.

FLORIDA

The first gathering of the Fulbright Association Miami Chapter was a great success. Harriet Mayor, Director of the Fulbright Association, was guest speaker and outlined the history of the Fulbright Program and the purposes and possible activities of a local chapter. The chapter is planning an exciting schedule of activities for the fall 1990 beginning with an opening reception with Senator Fulbright as honored guest.

For those interested in chapter membership, please contact Diane Widmer at 347-3209 or 445-0061, or Elena de Jongh at 271-7192 or 547-2531.

ILLINOIS

The Chicago Chapter of the Fulbright Association invited its members to a talk by Bob Riggle, Fulbright grantee to China for 1999-2000, called "A View of China." He is a Yale University and Harvard Law School graduate and has just completed three years of teaching at Handan City and People's University in Beijing, China.

MASSACHUSETTS

The Fulbright Association-Boston has appreciated the opportunities provided this spring at two valuable forums: "A Celebration of the Fulbright Program" and "Global Education and Cultural Exchange." The first was sponsored by the Boston Fulbright Committee and took place at the Harvard President's House; the second was organized by the Boston Center for International Visitors together with the League of Women Voters of Hingham and was held at the Hingham Historical Society.

EASTERN MASS. FORUMS

The first forum, "Environmental Challenges Facing the International Community," featured speakers. The dinner discussion topic was "Global Education and Cultural Exchange." One of the speakers was Dr. Lester Brown, President of Worldwatch Institute and former Salzburg Seminar Faculty member.

The membership committee - Dr. Sarah Stevenson of St. Thomas College and Dr. Virginia Schubert of Macalester College - sent a membership appeal to all Fulbrighters found in the area. This increased the membership and helped to update the list.

Officers for the coming year are:

President - Vern Johnson, University of Minnesota
Immediate Past President - Mary Nachtsheim, The College of St. Catherine
President-Elect - Elizabeth S. Blake, University of Minnesota-Morris
Secretary-Treasurer - Ruth Askow, Augsburg College

NEW YORK

At the annual meeting of the New York Chapter, held at Pace University on May 20, an absorbing talk on law and the American Courts was given by Frank Scardilli (Italy 1949), Senate Staff Counsel for the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. Mr. Scardilli talked of the difference between law and justice, the slow change of law in response to society's needs, the role and importance of a mediator, and the fact that the adversarial nature of our trial system does not always allow for a determination of the truth.

Chapter plans for next year include a theater party, hosting foreign Fulbrighters, publication of a local New York directory of American Fulbrighters, a foreign tour, and a discussion of ways to promote interest among students in applying for Fulbright scholarships.

PENNSYLVANIA

The Philadelphia Area Chapter held its annual business meeting in April. Special guests were representatives from the area directors' offices of both the International Professional Exchange Program and the Experiment in International Living's Aupair Homestay Program. Area Fulbrighters were briefed on both programs and invited to participate as host families. Officers for the new business year were also elected as follows:

President - Miriam April Monitor - Helen Berezovsky Treasurer - Elaine Sharer Secretary - Judy Nygaard Trustees - Angelika Eberhard, David Lanser, Ward Stanley

Journalist Exchange Program Launched

Six journalists, three from the U.S. and three from Mexico, participated in a unique three-month bilateral exchange program to improve understanding between the United States and Mexico. During the exchange, which began in April and ended in June, the journalists worked at host newspapers in each country, writing feature stories and "think pieces" on key issues in Mexican-U.S. relations for publication back in their home countries.

At each paper, the fellows were placed with a colleague who acted as a "mentor", helping them make professional contacts during the course of the exchange. The program was sponsored by the Ford Foundation, the Miguel Alcén Foundation (of Mexico), and the Tinker Foundation, and administered by the Institute of International Education.

To help the fellows settle quickly into their new professional environment, each group of journalists took part in an orientation session arranged by IIE. The Mexican journalists were hosted by the Center for Foreign Journalists in Washington, D.C., where they were introduced to the workings of the American media. Their Mexican counterparts were hosted by IIE/Mexico City and the Miguel Alcén Foundation. At the end of the exchange program, from June 26-30, the journalists gathered at IIE New York headquarters for a workshop to evaluate their experiences and journalism assignments, and to discuss ways to continue the goals of the program after their return.

The journalists selected to participate were:

COERCION AND ITS FALLOUT
by Murray Sidman

NEW IN 1989, 262 pp. A prominent behavior analyst views the devastating consequences of coercion in the schools, on the job, in law enforcement, religion, the family, diplomacy... "The basic research on coercion has been done; it is time to talk about its significance."

"Coercive pressure is causing all economic and social classes to mistrust and fear the police."

"People who use shocks become shocks."

"By negotiating, paying, ransom, and providing unlimited publicity, governments and news media guarantee the continuance of terrorism."

"The dove and hawk analogy has a curious twist. Doves appear to be survivors while hawks have become an endangered species."

"We justify coercion in the name of education, civilization, morality, and self-defense... but we do not have to punish in order to stop people from acting badly."

12th Annual Fulbright Association Conference
GLOBALIZATION AND THE FULBRIGHT PROCESS

OCTOBER 5-7, 1989
Co-sponsored by The George Washington University
Washington, D.C.

As the Fulbright Program enters its 41st year, it encounters a global political and cultural environment dramatically different from the conditions in 1946. On his return from the recent summit meeting of leaders in Europe, President Bush noted that we may even be looking at the beginning of a new world order.

The 1989 Fulbright Association Conference will examine the impact of changes such as Europe's experimentation with a multinational parliamentary system and the effects of environmental, technology and cultural diplomacy in shaping the global alliances, as we move towards the year 2000.

This Conference will challenge its participants and attendees to examine the effect these emerging trends have on the process of achieving Senator Fulbright's goal of "a leadership committed to human values, to world peace and to the improvement of the human condition."

Senator J. William Fulbright
26 May 1988
Fulbright Lecturers
Write of Trials and Optimism from China

From August of 1988 until June 1989, Fulbright lecturer Barbara Ranagan and her husband Larry Siffman lived in China at Wuhan University. The following is excerpted from letters written to friends which were printed in The Washington Post on June 21, 1989.

"I hardly know where to begin. On the one hand, I have waited too long to write: my head is overflow- ing with images that I cannot describe easily or coherently. On the other hand, many of these images are crude and, I fear, speaking of them is even cruder. I will never be able to raise them over dinner. And even if our digestion is not at stake, I have tried to discuss some of these things in the refined atmospheres of our homes, I wonder if they will not lose some of their reality.

It was difficult to write during the winter. Even when we had heat, it was necessary to wear long underwear as well as several other layers of clothing while in our apartment. Teaching a three-hour class in an unheated, windowless classroom (the windows are there but the glass in gone) was at best a bracing experience. I had brought fingerless gloves, so I could write on the blackboard, but they were inadequate.

In the eight months that we have been here, I have had six respiratory infections, I have thrown up three times, and I have had more cases of chickenpox than I can count. Larry has not fared much better. I have to complain to you because I cannot complain to anyone here: everyone else has been just as sick.

When we attended the Fulbright conference in Kunming, we learned that some of the other Fulbright professors had become ill enough to warrant hospitalization. So I suppose in some bizarre way we are fortunate. We are also tired.

That we are Americans unaccustomed to the conditions in a Third World country has little to do with why we are often sick. First, as you know, Larry and I have been to China before and have traveled throughout Southeast Asia. Second, our Chinese students are sick with greater frequency than we are. All of the students in my classes appear to have chronic respiratory infections. In other words, no one is accustomed to these conditions. No wonder - the housing and diet of students defies belief.

Perhaps you have been able to visualize our apartment from previous descriptions. If not, imagine the apartment of Alice and Ralph in "The Honeymooners," only down-ended. The narrow passageway joining the two dormitories is at best a bracing experience. The windows are there but the glass is gone. We have brought fingerless gloves so we could write on the blackboard, but they were inadequate.

Each dormitory room houses four graduate students. Two bunk beds, aligned end to end, line one side of a room. Four tiny desks line the opposite wall. The narrow passageway of bare cement between them is barely large enough for four people to stand in. I cannot imagine all four people trying to dress at the same time in such a small space.

One of a class of 19 students, there are five who regard as bright lights. This strikes me as very high percentage. And I am pleased to report that my young are among them. In the past, I had read articles expressing concern that many of China's judges had to legal training. While I cannot dispute these accounts, I can say, at least, the ones in my classes have a sense of justice that is roughly like yours or mine. I am very optimistic about their futures.

Love, Barbara and Larry"

Fulbright Lecturer Initiates Yugoslav-U.S. University Exchanges

"It turned out, quite accidentally, that I was the first academic foreign technical engineer to visit Yugoslavia since World War II," wrote Robert Schiffman, Professor of Engineering Technology at Colorado State University at Boulder. "It is impossible to describe the warmth and hospitality of all my hosts."

Schiffman first visited Yugoslavia for two weeks in 1964 as a lecturer, but was arranged at his request to visit Ljubljana for research purposes. As a result he was asked by the Slovenian Academy of Sciences to return in 1971 for one month. During that time he became an advisor in the development of a computing machine capability thanks to his other position, that of Associate Director for Research at the University of Colorado Computing Center.

Next came an invitation to apply for a Fulbright Fellowship at the Faculty of Civil Engineering of the University of Zagreb, where he worked with post-graduate students and young engineers on the development of computational methods in civil engineering and advised the Civil Engineering Institute on the development of computer hardware and software and the organization of computing facilities. Since then Schiffman has been in constant communication with the engineers of Zagreb, and he continues to visit them at least once a year. In his summary of what the Fulbright experience produced, he states:

- There is a formal exchange program between the University of Zagreb and the University of Colorado.
- A formal bilateral research project between ourselves and the Civil Engineering Institute in Yugoslavia is in place under NSF sponsorship.
- In 1987 Schiffman received the first Special Commendation from the Civil Engineering Institute of Zagreb. Four of their staff members have successfully completed their PhD's at the University of Colorado.
- A formal bilateral research project between ourselves and the Civil Engineering Institute in Yugoslavia is in place under NSF sponsorship.

From the BFS: Photos, Anyone?

The Board of Foreign Scholarships is looking for photographs that vividly portray a Fulbright Experience. These are for use in the Board's next Annual Report to Congress and to be published early in 1990.

Black-and-white photographs are preferable because of the print quality of the final product. Caption information would be appreciated, as would the year and country of Fulbright. We will return photos on request. Please send them to:

Recent Achievements

Daniel Asia (United Kingdom 1986, Federal Republic of Germany 1980), Professor of the School of Music of the University of Arizona, is the composer of "Symphony 1", which will be given its world premiere by the Seattle Symphony on February 19, 1990. The symphony was written while Mr. Asia was on a Fulbright scholarship in London. The Cincinnati Symphony will perform its mid-west premiere in March of 1990, and the American Composers Orchestra will premiere it in New York during its 1990/91 season.

Carol Finch (Cyprus 1980) and John Crunkilton (Greece 1983), Professors of Vocational and Technical Education at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, recently published the third edition of Curriculum Development and Technical Education (Allyn & Bacon, 1989).

Reminder: 1990-91 Fulbright Scholar Awards

The Council for International Exchange of Scholars (CIES) has announced that the 1990-91 competition for Fulbright Scholar Awards is in progress and that applications are encouraged from all academic disciplines for exchange programs and the potential and real successes of the Fulbright Program.

Fulbright Scholar Dennis Meadows Awarded Honorary Degree in USSR

Fulbright lecturer Dennis Meadows was awarded an honorary doctorate by the Mendeleev Institute for Chemical Technology for his work in promoting awareness of environmental issues and expanding environmental education in the USSR. The ceremony was attended by the Chairman of the State Committee for Public EnvironmentGeneral, and the USIS officers that had just begun: "I understand that I will receive the Fulbrighters' Newsletter and all other publications distributed by the Association, a 10% discount on all merchandise purchased with the Association, and an invitation to the annual meetings.

"The Institute's library is good but small," wrote Dr. Kinsman, "I decided that I would like to try to help build up the collection. I began by handing all my own American literature shipped over. I offered it to Dr. Carl Azavedo, Director of the Institute, who had it catalogued... "During a recent return trip to Portugal he presented the Institute with a check for $1,000, to be spent as the faculty choose. I plan to continue this effort: my departmental colleagues at the college where I presently teach - New Hampshire College in Manchester, NH - have offered to contribute, on an ongoing basis. American literature texts in good condition. Furthermore, in December 1989, as an additional personal gift, I will give the Institute a two-year subscription to the journal Studies in Brazilian Literature.

Siegfried G. Karsten (Federal Republic of Germany 1985, China 1987), Professor of Economics at West Georgia College, will participate in the Fulbright-Hayes Summer Seminar in India under the auspices of the Department of Education through Kennesaw State College.

Timothy J. Kubiak (Portugal 1984) has recently published the book, A Companion Guide to Portugal (Hippocrene Books, Inc., New York), research for which was done while the author was on a Fulbright scholarship. The book has been described as more than a travel guide. The volume provides a complete introduction to the cultural and physical geography of the fascinating country of Portugal. The publisher calls it “the guide for the discerning traveler.”

James O. Maloney (Italy 1957, Egypt 1960, Greece 1969), Emeritus Professor of chemical engineering, University of Kansas, has served as editor and contributor to A History of Engineering at the University of Kansas, 1868-1988, published in May 1989. He was a professor from 1945 to 1985 and is a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers.

K.S. Sitaram (India 1988), Professor of Radio-Television at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale, was the invited speaker at the annual conference of the Communication Association of Japan held on June 24-25 in Sapporo, Japan. Sitaram’s topic for the special lecture was “Intercultural Broadcasting: What, Why, and How?” Copies of the lecture are available on request from the author.

Susan B. Weiner (Japan 1980) has left Batterymarch Financial Management, where she managed external communications and Japanese Business development, to consult for American companies doing business with Japan. In the fall of 1989 she will offer a course on “How to Make Money in the Japanese Stock Market” for the Boston Security Analysts Society.

Alfred M. de Zayas (Federal Republic of Germany, 1972), senior legal officer with the United States Office at Geneva has published a third revised edition of his book, Nemesis at Potsdam (University of Nebraska Press, 1989). Also published was the English-language version of The Wehrmacht War Crimes Bureau (University of Nebraska Press, 1989); it was originally put out by Ullstein in Germany and later made into a two-hour television documentary.
