From the President

Dear Fulbrighters:

You have honored me by electing me president of the Fulbright Association for 1990. I thank you, and I hope to live up to your expectations.

On the personal side, after a decade at Columbia University, twenty-five years with U.S.I.A., and four years at the University of Virginia, I am making a full-time commitment to the Fulbright Association.

The challenge ahead for the association, as I see it, is steady progress towards a functioning network of 220,000 or more members throughout the world. At this special moment in history, the era of glasnost, Fulbrighters know better than anyone that the Fulbright program created for the time of cold war may not be the one needed for the challenges ahead. The Fulbright program must assess the many changes and grow with them.

The Fulbright Association is growing. Since the move from Bryn Mawr three years ago, we have made progress. The 12th annual meeting held in Washington this fall was oversubscribed. The new membership directory lists 20,000 members’ names and addresses (although 40,000 members are still to be found). Forty new alumni chapters have been formed in the United States and more are forming with Cleveland, Ohio being the latest. Our recent Report of the Nations describes twenty-nine overseas Fulbright alumni associations and there are more in formation. The association now has 30 institutional members including the Universities of Berkeley, Virginia, and Maryland. The newsletter has doubled in size and gone from three to four issues annually. The first volume of historical memoirs is out and the second being prepared.

However, the gap between potential and real is great. We need to enlist more members, both here and abroad. Although we add to the database 4-5000 newly found Fulbrighters annually, many are still to be found. The potential of this international network is great: to support and multiply the cultural, intellectual and socio-political impact of the Fulbright program and the values for which it stands. With that goal in mind, the Board has focused on several specific projects (still in the conceptual stage): to present a proposal for a global J. W. Fulbright prize for international understanding; to find a Washington building to serve as a Fulbright house with office, conference, and reception space; to add an annual supplement to the newsletter covering the progress of the Fulbright program - its history and the world issues to which the Fulbright constituency can address itself; to find funding for a Speakers’ Forum; to initiate a public policy TV series, the Fulbright Forum; to write a history of the Fulbright program.

The Fulbright Alumni Associations around the world is alive and well. From Bangkok to Brussels to Bogota, Fulbrighters are organizing associations to support the Fulbright Program, offer hospitality and orientation to visiting Fulbright scholars, help in selecting Fulbright scholars, and to sponsor social activities for Fulbrighters in the area.

The first Fulbright alumni association was founded in 1948 in Philippines and is still one of the most active, with a membership of 1,500, Belgium followed in 1952, Luxembourg in 1954, and Thailand in 1959. Two associations (India, Peru) were established in the 1960’s, four more in the 1970’s, and sixteen more in the last decade. Clearly the movement has begun. The largest organization is Japan’s with a membership of 6,000; India is second with 4,000 and the U.S. third with 3,000. Some of the smaller associations are as active as their bigger counterparts and point with pride to the large percentage of Fulbright alumni who are members. Some associations (India, Morocco, and Peru) are open to international exchange alumni from programs other than Fulbright.

Florida

Senator J. William Fulbright was the guest of honor at the fall reception of the Greater Miami chapter on November 20, 1989. Eighty-five Fulbright alumni, students, and scholars attended along with distinguished guests including President and Mrs. Edward T. Foote, University of Miami, and President Robert McCabe, Miami-Dade Community College. Senator Fulbright spoke on the interrelatedness of education and politics and the importance of the Fulbright program in promoting and achieving international understanding.

A Fulbright enrichment seminar will be held February 1-4, 1990, in Miami. Around 100 foreign Fulbright students studying in the Southern Region of the United States will attend to participate in workshops and attend a dinner in Miami. Around 100 foreign scholars attended along with distinguished Fulbright alumni, students, and scholars from three years in China.

Bruce Lansdale, a Fulbrighter to Greece in 1949, and for 35 years Executive Director of the American Farm School in Salonika, Greece, was honored on his retirement with a brunch for foreign Fulbrighters, Fulbright Association members, and presidents of other international organizations followed by a lecture by Bob Riggle who had just returned from three years in China.

Illinois

The Chicago chapter’s recent activities have included assisting the Institute of International Education at the annual seminar weekend “Meet the USA.” The event was co-sponsored by the United States Information Agency and was given for 200 foreign graduate students currently attending midwest universities. Bruce Douglas, President of the Chicago chapter, held a brunch for foreign Fulbrighters, Fulbright Association members, and presidents of other international organizations followed by a lecture by Bob Riggle who had just returned from three years in China.

Bruce Lansdale, a Fulbrighter to Greece in 1949, and for 35 years Executive Director of the American Farm School in Salonika, Greece, was honored on his retirement with several public events in Chicago and with commendations from Governor James Thompson, Mayor Richard Daley, and Senator Alan Dixon. Aphrodite Sarelas (Greece 1959) was program chairman for these events which were taped by Voice of America.

Minnesota

The Minnesota chapter is cooperating with the Minnesota International Center (on the campus of the University of Minnesota) which has received a grant of $300 from the National Association for Foreign Student Affairs for a Fulbright Enrichment Program to be administered by Dr. Zehra Avsar Keye. Projects include free tickets for Fulbright students or scholars to a Minnesota Orchestra concert and to a production at the Guthrie theatre, and trips to the Millie Lacs Indian Reservation as well as a boat trip down the Mississippi.

LASPAU: A Fulbright Program for Faculty Members from Latin American and the Caribbean

LASPAU is a nonprofit association of more than 300 universities and public and private-sector institutions located throughout the Americas. Affiliated with Harvard University and governed by an independent, inter-American board of trustees, LASPAU administers scholarship programs for a variety of sponsors including the United States Information Agency (USIA).

Recognizing LASPAU’s unique capabilities in supporting university development through specialized services particularly relevant to faculty training programs, USIA asked LASPAU in 1975 to assist in the administration of the Fulbright program for faculty members from Latin American and Caribbean universities.

Each year participating Latin American and Caribbean institutions are invited to nominate individuals whose professional ability and dedication indicate the potential to contribute significantly both to institutional and to national development. LASPAU evaluates and selects scholarship recipients for advanced training in the United States or, increasingly, in high-caliber institutions elsewhere in the hemisphere.

When necessary, LASPAU coordinates scholars’ English-language studies and then arranges for their admission to carefully chosen university or specialized training programs. While scholars are enrolled in these universities or training centers, LASPAU monitors their progress and administers their scholarship funds. When scholars are about to complete their programs of study, LASPAU makes sure that their nominating home institutions have reserved faculty or staff positions to which they can return.

While over eighty percent of Fulbright-LASPAU scholars study at the master’s level, the program also supports doctoral and non-degree study. Scholars return to their home countries to fill a variety of positions in teaching, research, and administration. Currently more than 200 scholars are selected each year.

Dean Maurice East Talks on ‘The Changing Nature of Diplomacy: The Person to Person Factor’

Maurice Alden East was appointed Dean of the Elliott School of International Affairs at The George Washington University in January of 1985. A Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Colgate University, Dr. East received his M.A. and Ph.D. in Politics at Princeton University. In 1963 he spent one year in Norway as a Fulbright scholar and was visiting lecturer in Uganda in 1971. He returned to Norway in 1978 as a Fulbright Research Scholar at the University of Oslo. Apart from numerous academic positions and publications, East has served as consultant to the U.S. Department of State and Norwegian Ministry of Foreign Affairs and is active in the International Studies Association and the United Nations Association.

In his presentation to the DC chapter of the Fulbright Association on the occasion of its annual dinner last May, Dr. East outlined the traditional responsibilities of a foreign service officer as U.S. representative abroad, reporter of events in the country where he is stationed, and analyst of those events. Radical changes in communications due to technological advances and the change in the role of the President in foreign policy has brought about changes in the role of an American diplomat. Global media network often reports foreign events accurately and in detail, rendering reports from the embassy superfluous, and analyses, which could prove useful, are too few because of the press of administrative tasks. During crises, the Executive Branch sends its own appointees to deal with the situation; the foreign service officer is therefore only able to act as representative in normal situations. This has brought service morale to an all-time low.

East feels that the problem is heightened by the fact that the State Department is no longer the sole arbiter of foreign policy thanks to the ‘internationalization’ of domestic politics. Not only do large corporations with multinational ties influence the countries in which they conduct business but other special interest groups are also entering the arena. Radio astronomers from a number of countries, for example, worked to convince their own local governments to change the international policies on information flows and achieved some measure of success.

With the great increase in the number and types of persons travelling abroad, the Fulbright Program no longer assumes the critical role it once did but is no less important in today’s climate of cooperation between all countries. People-to-people diplomacy operates with few constraints around the world and hence becomes increasingly powerful.

East emphasized that the values and freedom which made the United States a world power are of concern to all of us. For people in leadership positions today, the Marshall Plan and the Truman Doctrine are ancient history. We need to let others know about the unique and outstanding characteristics of our country today—a difficult task when the youth of Europe are focussing more on Asia, the Middle East and other parts of Europe than on the U.S. as they complete their socialization.

The Fulbright Program was characterized by East as one of the best programs because the contact is not impersonal and institutional but one-on-one, allowing people to be their most effective by demonstrating to others our diversity and our excellence.

The American Junior Year Program

Heidelberg College offers you two unique opportunities to further your language proficiency in the heart of romantic Germany. The Junior Year Program enables qualified college and university students to spend a fall junior year or a semester at one of Germany’s outstanding centers of education and culture—the University of Heidelberg. Since 1958, more than 1600 students from 250 colleges and universities have been challenged by the intensive study offered there.

Today’s study-abroad students are looking for that special opportunity to live a language, as well as learn it. Your success may depend upon how well your educational experiences are designed. Write us at The American Junior Year Program at Heidelberg for information on how 32 years of international experience can help you realize your foreign-study goals. For more information, contact the American Junior Year Program at HEIDELBERG COLLEGE, 310 East Market Street, Tiffin, OH 44883-2434. Telephone: (419) 448-2256. Facsimile: (419) 448-2124.

Second Volume of Fulbright Memoirs in Preparation

The second in the series of books projected by the Fulbright Association, following "The Fulbright Experience" (Transaction 1987), is in the initial stages of preparation. Preliminary discussions with Transaction Press and Oxford University Press are under way.

Tentatively entitled "The Fulbright Difference", from a phrase of Michael Cardozo in the first volume, this collection of essays by former Fulbrighters will attempt to explore how the Fulbright experience changes the lives it touches, and why a Fulbright year differs from the experience of other programs for overseas study, research and teaching.

The collection, projected for 1992, will be edited by the president of the Fulbright Association, Richard T. Arndt, and David L. Rublin, professor of French at the University of Virginia and founder of "Continuum", an annual devoted to problems of seventeenth-century French literature.

Focusing on the intellectual, cultural and professional impact of the Fulbright year, the volume will contain unsolicited as well as commissioned essays by a balanced mix of American and foreign alumni.

Members and others interested in proposing contributions are invited to prepare an abstract of 500 to 1000 words and mail it to Dr. Richard Arndt, the Fulbright Association, 1307 New Hampshire Avenue NW, Washington, D.C. 20036.

1990-91 Fulbright Scholar Awards Competition

About 1,000 Fulbright awards in research and university lecturing, for periods ranging from three months to an academic year, are available for the 1990-91 academic year from the Council for International Exchange of Scholars (CIES). There are openings in over 100 countries, and in some regions the opportunity exists for multi-country research.

Fulbright awards are granted in virtually all disciplines. Grant benefits, which vary from country to country, generally include round-trip travel (for most academic awards, one way); monthly stipend; and in some countries, tuition allowance. In most countries there is also tuition allowance for school-age children.

Basic eligibility requirements for a senior Fulbright award are: U.S. citizenship; Ph.D. or comparable professional assignments; university or college teaching experience; and, for selected assignments, foreign language proficiency.

Application deadlines for the awards are as follows:

June 15, 1989: Australasia, India, the Soviet Union, and Latin America except lecture awards to Mexico, Venezuela, and the Caribbean. (Note: new deadline for Soviet Union.)

August 1, 1989: Africa, Asia Western Europe, Eastern Europe, the Middle East and lecture awards to Mexico, Venezuela, and the Caribbean; travel only awards to France, Italy and Federal Republic of Germany. (New deadline.)

November 1, 1990: Institutional proposals for Scholar-in-Residence Program and International Education Administrators Program in Federal Republic of Germany, United Kingdom, and Japan; and the Fulbright German Studies Seminars.

January 1, 1991: NATO Research Fellowship and Spain Research Fellowships.

For information and applications write the Council for International Exchange of Scholars, 3400 International Drive, Suite M-500, Washington, D.C. 20008-3097. Tel: (202) 686-7866.

1990-91 Research Fellowships With Romania

In light of political changes in Romania, the Council for International Exchange of Scholars is accepting applications in any field of research. In addition to lecturing awards in American literature and Teaching English as a Foreign Language, awards in other fields are possible. Research awards are for 3 to 10 months; total duration of the awards must not exceed 50 months. Scholars may conduct research in any field. Knowledge of Romanian is required in most cases. Ph.D. is required. Approximately ten lecturing awards available in the following fields: American literature, TESOL, business administration, management, constitutional law, any field. For additional information and application forms, write to CIES, 3400 International Drive, NW, Suite M-500, Washington, D.C. 20008-3097. Telephone (212) 686-6249.

1991-92 Advanced Research Fellowships in India

The Indo-U.S. Subcommission on Education and Culture is offering twelve long-term (6-10 months) and nine short-term (2-3 months) awards for 1991-92 research in India. These grants will be available in all academic disciplines, except clinical medicine. Applicants must be U.S. citizens, have completed their postdoctoral or equivalent professional level, and have professional or academic experience with limited or no prior experience in India are especially encouraged to apply. Application deadline is June 15, 1990. Information and application forms are available from CIES, 3400 International Drive, Suite M-500, Washington, D.C. 20008-3097. Tel: (202) 686-4013.

U.S. Japan Leadership Program

The Japan Society is pleased to give Fulbright Alumni the opportunity to nominate themselves or others for the U.S.-Japan Leadership Program. Americans of leadership quality from the age of thirty to forty-five from the fields of government, business, labor, education and journalism are encouraged to apply. The program aims at developing a cadre of future American leaders who have a solid working knowledge of Japan in addition to their own area of expertise. Eight individuals will be selected to learn about Japan through guided self-education and orientation culminating in a minimum two-month residency in Japan and continued involvement in U.S.-Japan relations.

The deadline for candidate nominations is March 30, 1990, and the deadline for candidate nominations will be June 30. Applications and further information may be obtained by contacting Juliette Wycoff, U.S.-Japan Program, Japan Society, 335 East 47th Street, New York, NY 10017. Telephone: (212) 832-1153 or fax (212) 755-6752.

New Board Members

The Board of Directors of the Fulbright Association invites its membership to submit proposals for new board members as the new calendar year begins. The Nominating Committee would like suggestions for potential new members. Please submit your ideas in writing to the Nominating Committee, 1307 New Hampshire Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20036.

The Board also passed a recommendation to add regional representatives to the local chapters on the Board and has requested the Legal Committee to formulate the procedures for such representatives.

Fulbright Certificates

The Fulbright Association is still issuing certificates in cooperation with the Board of Foreign Scholars to all grantees upon completion of the grant. Hand lettered on the certificate is the name of the Fulbrighter, the country, and the date on which the certificate was issued. Each certificate is issued for a single Fulbright grant, and those who have had more than one Fulbright grant may order certificates for each grant. It is signed by the Chairman of the Board of Foreign Scholars. The cost is $15 per certificate.

Fulbright alumni may request a certificate order form from the Fulbright Association, 1307 New Hampshire Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036. Once the order and payment have been received, processing will take four to six weeks.

Did You Live Abroad as a Child?

Does living abroad as a child influence one's adult life, and if so, how? Drs. John and Ruth Useem, Michigan State, and Dr. Ann Baker Cotrell of San Diego State (India 1964-66) are trying to answer this question. They are seeking people (currently between ages 25 and 45) who lived outside their country of citizenship for at least one year when they were between the ages 5 & 18 because of a parent's employment, and who presently live In California or Michigan and contiguous states. American citizenship is not necessary. To help with this research project please contact: Dr. Ann Baker Cotrell, Sociology Department, San Diego State University, San Diego, CA 92182.
